Check It Out!

Ask these questions to evaluate your child care options:

- Does the person who will be caring for your child have special training in early childhood education, First Aid and CPR?
- How long has the child care provider been providing child care?
- If there is more than one child care provider in the setting, is the total number of children in the group still small (group size)?
- Is one child care provider caring for just a few children (low adult to child ratio)?
- If you are considering a more formal child care program, is it state licensed or regulated? Is it nationally accredited?
- Have satisfactory criminal history background checks been conducted on each adult present?
- Has the program been inspected by the licensing agency within the last 12 months?
- Does the child care provider welcome drop-in visits, and parent ideas and involvement?
- Does the child care provider get on the children’s eye level to talk with them and give them lots of attention and encouragement?
- Are there planned activities for children to do as well as lots of time for free play?
- Are materials such as books, blocks, toys and art supplies available to children all day long?
- Does the place look clean and safe, and does everyone wash his or her hands often?
- Does the child care provider have written policies and procedures, including emergency plans?
- Does the child care provider have references?
- You know your child best—will your child be happy there?

Finding Help Paying for Child Care

Your Child is Priceless . . .

but paying for quality child care can be a struggle. In fact, child care is probably the second largest expense in your budget after rent or mortgage payments.

By following these steps to child care budgeting, you may be able to reduce child care costs or get some help paying child care bills.
Five Steps to Healthy Child Care Budgeting:

1. Plan Ahead

   Start thinking about child care options and cost far in advance as you can. No matter what type of care you are considering—a child care center, care in someone’s home, or care for an infant, toddler, preschooler or school-age child—finding the right child care option or help with child care expenses can take some time.

2. Call the Experts

   Begin the search by calling your local experts—your local Child Care Resource & Referral agency (CCR&R). CCR&R can give you the facts about child care. They can also provide a list of child care options and financial assistance programs in your area. CCR&R can give you the facts about child care. Call the Experts can take some time.

3. Be a Smart Consumer

   When you are at work, you want to know that your child is getting the kind of quality care that all children need to be healthy, happy and ready for school. The Check It Out checklist in this brochure helps you evaluate the value of the child care you are buying for your family. You can use this checklist in a child care center, a family child care home (care in someone else’s home), or for an in-home provider who comes to your home. The money you pay goes toward the caregivers’ salary and on-going education and training so they can meet your child’s needs. Your child care fees also help you purchase food, toys, equipment, supplies, and pay for insurance, rent or mortgage and other necessary expenses. Once you have evaluated your options and decided on a child care setting, be an involved and informed consumer. Visit often and participate in events at your child’s program. This sends a strong message to your child and your child’s provider that you think what your child is doing and learning is important.

4. Find Out What Kind of Help May Be Available

   The following child care assistance programs help families with the high cost of child care. Each type of child care financial assistance has different qualifications, so work with your local CCR&R and your employer’s human resources department to make sure you get all the facts.

   - State Child Care Fee Assistance Programs
     Child care fee assistance programs are available in every community that has high child care costs. Usually, child care assistance is available for working families who are earning low incomes, receiving TANF, or in some cases enrolled in school. If eligible, you will pay part of the cost while the rest is paid directly to your selected child care provider.

   - Local Programs
     Local government, United Way agencies, or other community or faith-based organizations sometimes provide child care scholarships.

   - Employer/College Support
     Your employer may provide child care scholarships, discounts to certain programs or on-site child care at reduced rates. Colleges or universities may also have programs to help with child care costs.

   - Child Care Program Assistance
     Your child care provider may offer scholarships, discounts or a sliding fee scale.

   - Pre-Kindergarten (Pre-K) Programs
     Many states offer free or low cost prekindergarten programs for 3- and 4-year-old children. Eligibility requirements vary by state but the goal of all pre-kindergarten programs is to make sure that children are prepared for kindergarten. Public schools and other child care settings offer pre-kindergarten programs during school hours.

   - Head Start and Early Head Start
     Head Start and Early Head Start are federally- and sometimes state-funded full- or part-day programs that provide free early education and other services to help meet the health and school readiness needs of children in income eligible families. Costs

5. Consider All Options

   Think about what your family needs and take a close look at your budget. Are there alternatives to paying for full-time child care? Is it possible or desirable to work fewer hours? If you are in a two-parent household, can you work at different times and share some hours of child care? Could you share child care expenses with another family? The most important thing is that your family and child are healthy and happy. By planning, getting the facts and using all available resources—especially your local CCR&R—you are off to a good start in making the best choice for your family.
